One interesting thing which Senator Lewis is alleged to have told the Paris reporters was that the issues of the next presidential election will be those growing out of the peace conference. This is interpreted to mean that there will be a peace conference and, perhaps, a treaty of peace. But since the terms of settlement are not yet known, it is not so easy to forecast how the issues will shape themselves.

The watch on the Rhine is expected shortly to take on a new importance.

Following word of caution:

"The compulsory voting amendment proposed for the state constitution deserves careful consideration. It simply would authorize the legislature to enact a compulsory voting law and fix penalities for not voting short of disenfranchisement. Some time, the experiment might well be tried; the statute could be repealed if it were found to be unworkable or obnoxious to public sentiment after a satisfactory test. Let the voters think it over between now and election day in November."
